AN ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF A MAD DOG

Good people all, of every sort,
Give ear unto my song;
And if you find it wondrous short,
It cannot hold you long.	4
In Islington there was a Man
Of whom the world might say,
That still a godly race he ran,
Whene'er he went to pray.	8
A kind and gentle heart he had,
To comfort friends and foes ;
The naked every day he clad ,
When he put on his clothes.	12
And in that town a Dog was found,
As many dogs there be,
Both mongrel, puppy, whelp, and hound,
And curs of low degree.	16
This Dog and Man at first were friends;
But when a pique began,
The Dog, to gain his private ends,
Went mad, and bit the Man.	20
Around from all the neighboring streets
The wondering neighbors ran,
And swore the Dog had lost his wits,
To bite so good Man.	24

The wound it seem's both sore and sad

To every Christian eye;

And while they swore the Dog was mad.

They swore the Man would die.

But soon a wonder came to light,
That show'd the rogues they lied;
The man recover'd of the bite,
The Dog it was that died.

About the Poet:

Oliver Goldsmith (1728-1774), one of the most popular 18th century English writers, lived a fascinating life of contradiction between his unquestionable brilliance and self destructive tendencies. His plays, poems and essays have been very popular.

About the Poem:

The present poem is an extract from Oliver Glodsmith novel The Vicare of Wakefield. It mourns the death of a mad dog and is called an "Elegy" in a satirical way. An elegy is a poem which expresses sad feelings over the death of a friend or of an important person.

The poet describes friendship between a man and a dog. At first they get along well, but after some time they begin to quarrel and become enemies. The dog goes mad and bites the man. The towns people lament that this good man must die a wretched death, betrayed by the ungrateful cur that he had trusted. Contrary to the prediction of the townspeople, the man has recovered and the dog has died. Thus something unusual happened.

The poem is a good example of satire on human behaviour. The sudden reversal of situations in the end of the poem makes the satire bitter: the man believed to die recovers and the dog cursed for deceit dies. The man, under the mask of innocence, proves fatal to the innocent animal.
